

There are diverging research programs on explanation preferences: One says we're drawn to *teleology*, the other to *mechanism*. How can we understand such different conclusions? Here, we argue that these preferences may result from two different kinds of mechanistic explanations!